“The ARC is a statutory authority within the Australian Government's Innovation, Industry, Science and Research (IISR) portfolio.

Its mission is to advance Australia's research excellence to be globally competitive and deliver benefits to the community.

In seeking to achieve its mission, the ARC provides advice to the Government on research matters and manages the National Competitive Grants Program (NCGP), a significant component of Australia's investment in research and development.

(About 400 million dollars each year, could rise to 7-800 million dollars, RL)

Through the NCGP, the ARC supports the highest-quality fundamental and applied research and research training through national competition across all disciplines, with the exception of clinical medicine and dentistry.”

THE ARC

“Outcomes: Results of research in the real world

Sometimes people forget that research is important, but just about everything in our modern world is the result of knowledge gained through research.

For example, in our every day lives, many of us access the Internet, take medicine, turn on a heater or air conditioner, exercise at the gym, travel by various modes of transport, eat foods grown with the aid of fertilisers or manufactured by machines, wear synthetic or a mixture of natural and synthetic fibres, and use toothpaste to brush our teeth. We do all these things and more without necessarily asking ourselves why or how we are able to do so.

Thinking 'bigger picture', we can travel into space, modify genes, predict the weather, get a heart transplant, explore shipwrecks at the bottom of the ocean, date fossils and artefacts that have been around for thousands of years, create environmentally safe alternatives to pollutants, and use DNA to solve crimes.

And the reason we can do all of these things, of course, is research.”

THE ARC

“The ARC Discovery programs fund individual researchers and projects.

The ARC Linkage programs help to broker partnerships between researchers and industry, government and community organisations as well as the international community. The ARC Centres programs build research scale and focus and strengthen major research partnerships and networks.”

APPROVED TITLE: Real-time Porosity: Using computer gaming technology to map and analyse pedestrian movement in public and private space..

COLLABORATING PARTNER: The Department of Lands; specifically, the Emergency Information Collection Unit (EICU)

PROJECT SUMMARY: This project will make a major, and ongoing, contribution to our understanding of urban space in a major Australian city. The Porosity Lenses will enable a more complete understanding of pedestrian movement that the Emergency Information Coordination Unit (EICU) believes will directly contribute to protecting Australia from terrorism and crime. In the case of terrorism the socio/economic benefits of even the smallest success can be immeasurable. The need to anticipate and mitigate the impact of catastrophic events on the city will be balanced, in this study, by a concern to maintain freedom of circulation and promote civic opportunities within previously under-utilised zones.

POLITICAL

"Eddo Stern, a C-level member with Mr. Condon, said the commercial game industry has, like the film industry, focused on escapist entertainment. But now, he said, "what we're trying to do in a sense is create documentary video games."

Julian Oliver, the director of SelectParks, a media lab in Melbourne, Australia, said game-art projects based on virtual re-creations typically deliver their creators' vision of an otherwise inaccessible space. They also can be used to alter people's experience of a public place or a historic moment.

"Normally they're not just straight simulations where you simply play out the events as they were then," Mr. Oliver said. "You can revisit those events and play them differently and explore them from many different camera angles."

With two other artists, he is developing "Escape From Woomera" (www.escapefromwoomera.org), a virtual reconstruction of four Australian immigration-detention centers."
